

Dear Jane,
More than 200 years later, your words speak to us still! Your stories, your characters, your insights into our relationships live on vividly in our collective imaginations even in 2022. Just as you have recorded your words and left them to your future readers, here, I've composed a conversation between the two of us, even though we are separated by time and space. I've collected your words that resonate with me the most and responded with this and that. Is it a circle or a moon against the creamy, pale page? A soft flurry of wind or water paired with a space of lemon yellow?

A large, textured blue circle is centered on a green background. The blue circle has a mottled, painterly texture, while the green background is a lighter, more uniform shade with some subtle texture. The circle is positioned in the upper right quadrant of the overall composition.

Clean, straight lines to uneven, torn edges, quiet tones that whisper to saturated shapes that speak loudly, I've included all forms of paper to echo the range of emotions, ups and downs, ins and outs of your stories.

A white, torn paper shape is centered on a white background. The shape is irregular and jagged, resembling a piece of paper that has been torn or cut. It is positioned in the lower left quadrant of the overall composition.

Cut, pasted and stitched with care, I hope these spaces invite the reader, the viewer to revisit and reimagine your words.

With love,
Camila
